IT LOOKS NOW as if the Wallace twosome is way out in front for governor. Just what may develop between now and May 3rd is anyone's guess. No one agrees with me but I think it would not be good for George and Lucile to be nominated in the first primary for several reasons. Already there is some talk about the L&L and Company wanting Wallace elected so they can continue to make Alabama a "whipping boy" and that he will get a big portion of the Negro vote. According to the number of Negro votes that could be cast Wallace will have to have a portion of them in order to be nominated in the first primary and it would indicate that George and Lucile are receiving the Johnson & Humphrey blessing. That would bounce on them in the general election this fall, apparently, Wallace is getting his big vote because he talks loud and loud about those "out-laws" in Washington. He made an issue of Alabama schools not being integrated if he was elected governor four years ago, though he is not talking about those lines at all this time. I think it would be safer if George and Lucile are not nominated in the first primary as many seem to think they will be. It would be bad for them to get such a huge vote May 3rd and lose it in November which is very possible.

It has happened before and could happen again that the support leader in the governor's race, and especially when the voters have overconfidence, end up "out-of-the-leader". Peeking too soon could mean being run-up, though George and Lucile have apparently held a strong lead. In his first race for governor his timing ended up being bad but there is one big difference this time. His opponent then was John Patterson who was riding on the popularity of the clean-up at Phenix City and because he was fresh and known by even the children, Patterson does not have that recognition at this time though he came from behind when he was considered to be in third or fourth place then, also, but ended up in first place. This time the Wallaces are offering no platform and promising nothing but "Stand Up For Alabama" which many think is all that Alabama needs. There is every indication that the candidates eliminated in the May 3rd primary will throw their support to the candidate against Lucile. That could mean defeat May 31st. Wallace is not supposed to get the Negro vote but he is being mighty coy about it hoping the white people who are so bitterly against integration will continue to think he will fight those "out-laws" in Washington and be against the Negro, and at the same time courting the Negro vote and give them the impression that he is their best friend of the past.

I'm not criticizing anyone for courting the Negro vote. If I was a candidate I would wait until the vote, also. When the votes are counted the Negro votes are going to count just as much as a vote by a white person. In 1962 Wallace was strong on the racial issue but failed during the time he has been governor on all integration issues. This time it is different — he is avoiding the racial issue as everyone has noticed.

But as of this date it looks like Wallace all the way in this area. It now looks like Joe Gilchrist or Richmond Flowers in second place, but that also could change rapidly now that the campaign is nearing home base. I find Folsom and Patterson support that may be strong enough to mean getting in the run-off.

WE SPEND so much time talking and thinking about the governor's race that we are forgetting the other offices in the state and county. I think it more necessary this time than ever in Alabama's history that special attention be given to the race of Lieutenant Governor, The Lieutenant Governor could end up being governor so it is very necessary that a lot of attention be given to those candidates. Study their past actions and decide just as seriously which one you think would make the best governor for he could end up being the governor.

their annual rally and chicken dinner Saturday and Andalusia presented just a plain old political rally Saturday afternoon. I made them all. There was some real old-time knock down drag out speeches which reminded me of political races we read about in history. I really enjoyed them even to the errors some of them made. One candidate got up after several candidates for office asking that they be sent to Washington. So one of the county candidates finished his talk with a request that "he be sent to Washington". His opponent remarked that that is just what we are going to do "Send him to Washington. I'm going to Montgomery."

MARY GRICE, Candidate for Congress for the 2nd Congressional District was all wound up Saturday afternoon in Andalusia and when the buzzer went off denoting that her time was up she said, without stopping her speech, "start charging me."

It seems that candidates were charged a dollar a minute after the buzzer. Following her years of her opponent Bob Whaley, who started his talk off with "I'm not up here to put on a show," which brought on some laughs and applause.

I HAVE never seen so many dogwood blossoms, bush honeysuckle, and other spring flowers as we have had in the woods this spring. It is sorta sad to see the azalea blossoms fading away after being so beautiful.

Even though not required by the Constitution most of the 50 states as they came into the Union organized their legislatures following the federal pattern — one house apportioned according to population and one by geographical areas. In this way statewide and regional interests were balanced with the concerns and wishes of the populous city areas. But on June 15, 1964, the Supreme Court by a six to three decision ruled that both houses in state legislatures must be made up of districts equal in population.

The question is this — by what right does a federal court set aside the wishes of the people and redesign the government of the states? Senator Everett Dirksen has introduced a Constitutional Amendment, Senate Joint Resolution 103, which, if adopted, would permit the people in each state to continue, if they wished, to apportion one house of their state legislature on factors other than population. A majority of congressmen support this Amendment but it takes two thirds approval to change the Constitution. Twenty eight states have passed resolutions calling for a national constitutional convention to bring the issue before the people but 34 are required.

If our congressional members were chosen on the basis of population only for both Representatives and Senators instead of on population for Representatives, and then 2 Senators for each state regardless of population, the voters from small towns and rural areas would have little voice in government. The people of every state must make their wishes known now.

Prices for soybeans and protein ingredients are expected to remain strong through the spring and summer.

CAVE DISCOVERY SHOWS ANCIENT ALABAMA LIFE

Russell Cave, a natural shelter in the northeastern corner of Alabama, displays ancient hunting gear and remnants of household wares which unfold 8,000 years of man's history. Uncovered only 13 years ago, this Bridgeport cave is now a national monument. Scientists already consider Russell one of the major archaeological finds of this century.

Indians lit their fires and lived in the cave over 4,000 years before the Great Pyramid of Egypt was built. For hundreds of generations these cave dwellers lived by hunting and gathering. They left behind the primitive tools of their trade which present day Alabamians use to trace the progress of civilization.

Chips of stone in the cave show that the Indians used the shelter to make weapon points which were the key to their survival. Long before bows and arrows were discovered, the Indians used a short spear, tipped with a stone point and propelled by a throwing stick to hunt deer, turkey and small game animals which abounded in the area.

The museum at Russell Cave depicts the changing styles of archaic weapon points. Early points were crude, blunt instruments. Those of a thousand years ago came to a sharper

Caldwell To Direct Selective Service System

Governor George C. Wallace has announced the appointment of Hugh J. Caldwell, Jr., of Montgomery, as Director of the Alabama Selective Service System.

Caldwell succeeds Glen Currie, named by Governor Wallace in January to be circuit judge of the 19th Judicial Circuit (Autauga, Chilton and Elmore Counties).

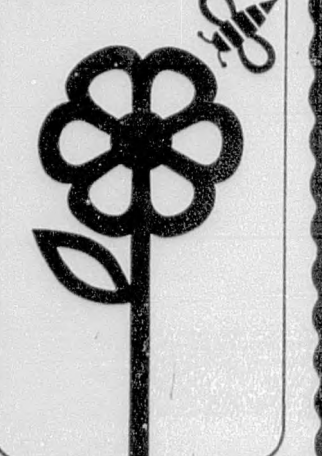

Caldwell, who was born in Montgomery, attended public schools in Trussville (Jefferson County), and Auburn University. In World War II, he was in the U.S. Navy for 16 months.

Owner of a Montgomery automobile agency, the new State Selective Service Director is married to the former Miss Mary Jane Mumma, of Trussville. They have four children.

A former president of the Montgomery Sales and Marketing Club, and a former director of the Red Cross, Caldwell has also been active in United Appeal work and other phases of Montgomery civic life.

Caldwell is a deacon and Sunday school teacher at Montgomery's Trinity Presbyterian Church.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

Foreign Bodies

Watchful waiting is a medical procedure used in treating persons who have swallowed foreign bodies. One children's hospital made a study of 600 cases of ingested items such as pins, marbles, tacks, screws, buttons, and coins.

Records indicate that when left alone, the vast majority of the objects which have reached the stomach will pass through the body spontaneously. This natural passage is the more astonishing in cases where the foreign object swallowed is a large safety pin, a 3-inch long hat pin, or a 25-cent piece.

A foreign object swallowed is usually to be found in either of three regions: the esophagus or gullet, the stomach, or the large bowel. When articles are caught in the lower portion of the esophagus, an oily material is given by mouth in an attempt to help the foreign body pass into the stomach. Many patients with foreign bodies stuck in the esophagus must be given surgical treatment to remove the article. The majority of foreign bodies are in the stomach when first medically observed. Every hospital is familiar with cases where objects swallowed include bolts, bobby pins, nails, rings, keys, paper clips, lockets, whistles, and tiny toys. The time when the object remains in the stomach varies from a few hours to three to ten days. While there is always anxiety in cases of swallowed objects in the stomach, physicians familiar with the situation hold the opinion that usually it presents no immediate serious threat to the patient. Once the object is in the stomach, sufficient time is allowed by the physician for it to pass spontaneously.

New GI Bill Bears Certain Restrictions

Post-Korean veterans planning to take advantage of the educational provisions of the new GI Bill should bear in mind certain restrictions. VA officials said recently. The new bill does not permit apprenticeship courses and other on-the-job or on-the-farm training, such as were authorized under previous GI bills.

Flight training by itself alone will not be permitted. It will become authorized only when it is part of a complete college or university program leading to a definite degree. Veterans discharged from the Armed Forces after January 31, 1955, will be eligible to begin courses after June 1, 1966. Full information may be obtained in any VA office and in most colleges and educational centers after April 15, 1966.
